WAREHOUSE MANAGEMENT

What is Warehouse Management System?

Warehouse Management System (WMS) is a software application that can be used to help control and manage the day-to-day operations in a warehouse. A perfect warehouse management system should have capabilities such as inventory received, put-away, order picking, stock locating, replenishment, packing shipping etc.

Also it should include integrated functionalities such as integration with barcode devices, labour management, slotting, parcel management, Integration with third party logistics management etc.

A warehouse management system can be operated independently or as part of an Enterprise Resource Planning (ERP) System. A warehouse management system can reduce the errors that could occur when the entire process of shipping the products, handled manually. The system can also help a company to process the orders more quickly and to trace the ordered products within the warehouse
